Backend Engineer - Ruby on Rails/ Elixir (f/m/x)

The international Payment & Billing team consists of business analysts, developers, and software test engineers. We closely work with product teams to put together sales models, provide the end-customer payment infrastructure and ensure a smooth billing process. We do this within a complex environment involving a number of internal and external technical interfaces where human collaboration is key to achieving success. Join our team and get involved in lots of exciting new projects.

A challenging task:

- Be part of our software development team in an agile environment.
- Discuss and implement innovative solutions closely with your team, our business analysts as well as internal and external partners.
- Develop in a high-risk area with sensitive data which goes beyond the scope of a standard Ruby on Rails application.

- Develop and maintain one of our applications in Elixir.
- Live the complete development cycle including writing automated tests, participating in code reviews and performing deployments.
- Work on scalable, high-availability services.

A convincing background:

- You care about the craft of software development and strive to build testable, predictable and simple code.
- You are able to write clean code in a Ruby on Rails environment.
